intensive basic course

What is Feng Shui?

After the ancient wisdom of “living rooms” was almost wiped out in our culture, the West found in the Chinese Feng Shui a way to re-discover the energies of landscapes, buildings and rooms.

The tradition of finding and creating places of power lived in Europe until well into the 18th Century. Through studies of ancient gardens, churches and castles, it is clear that the ancient architects were familiar with this kind of energy and they also purposefully used them. With the Age of enlightenment, when the era of reasoning started, the teachings of those not measurable vibrations passed out of the mind or were ridiculed.

Our senses tell us that there must be an explanation why certain places attract us and others not. But our mind often refuses to take these feelings seriously. With Feng Shui and its clear laws it is possible to describe the power of spaces and to use it. Our emotional perception will respond immediately when a room has been designed according to Feng Shui.

How do you benefit from Feng Shui?

In the centre of Feng Shui design stands the human being and his/her relation to space. Our environment affects us! Our energy, our well-being, our motivation and our health depend considerably on the premises in which we live and work. Therefore Feng Shui rooms are designed with long-tested criteria - colors, shapes, materials, plants, stones and decorative objects play an important role.

In addition to aesthetic and functional considerations, energetic qualities are exceedingly included in the room design. In this sense we use the positive effects of the naturally available vibrations for harmonious living and working.

Who is giving this course?

André Pasteur

After reading a Feng Shui book in the mid 80s, André was delighted about the philosophy that buildings have a significant influence on people. He was so fascinated that he began intensively with Feng Shui and subsequently also with the Chinese astrology. The passion of the ETH graduated pharmacist, grew over the years, as has his interest in architecture.

Since 1994 André Pasteur teaches Feng Shui mainly in his institute INFIS in Switzerland. The inexhaustible depth of Feng Shui brings with it that he is constantly increasing his own knowledge with further educations.
